

The workforce challenges of today are markedly different from those in the past. Leaders are asking their teams to do more with less, while reducing turnover and improving morale. That's why the Maryland Hospital Association and the Chesapeake Registry Program are partnering to offer a program that will bring healthcare facilities and staffing agencies together. Topics include:

- Resiliency and strength-building
- Recruitment and legal challenges
- The facility-agency experience
- Workforce development

Overview

The program will keep you engaged with opportunities to explore workforce resilience, a concept that can not only bolster the strength of your current team, but also lay the foundation for long-term recruitment and retention strategies.

Who Should Attend?

Facilities' and hospitals' nursing and allied health contacts, chief nursing officers, managers, clinical coordinators, directors and staffing contacts.
